

Name:

Facilitator names:

Recording Date:

Strategy:

To generate the written language () is using the strategy of Facilitated Communication (FC). FC is a strategy that supports the physical, communication, and emotional needs of a person with a severe communication impairment to move more purposefully to express themselves through an alternate mode of communication. The theory is rooted in the following related areas: sensory integration, motor skill development, speech and language, augmentative communication, and emotional development. There is research that both refutes and supports Facilitated Communication.

The chart below describes () communication skills as seen at this time.

Language Level	Least amount of support provided	Most amount of support provided	Display presented
Picture comm. Sys.
Identification of words
Spelling words
Comprehension/multiple choice
Comprehension/typed
Yes/no
Response to predictable questions.
Response to less predictable
Fill-in the blank
Response to open ended questions.
Creative writing
Personal journals
Math
Other			